How to paint ZOMBIE skin

Is there anything more disgusting than zombie skin? Yep, there is the troll-zombie skin

In this masterclass we will learn an effortless way to paint a faded and pale zombie skin.

Difficulty level is: 5 out of 10, perfect for beginners!

1.

I prime the miniature with a black spray primer. I do use Black Primer Spray "hobby paint" by Vallejo.

TRICK:

apply 3 quite thin layers, letting paint dry between layers.

2.

I paint the base color using DIRTY GREEN (Vallejo's ref 72.145), I do use the Airbrush GIRALDEZ INFINITY by Harder&Steenbeck, needle 0,4mm, Pressure 1.8 Bar.
Two layers of paint are enough.

3.

Next, I airbrush the first highlight using CAMOUFLAGE GREEN (Vallejo's Ref 72.031).

I do it to upper areas, trying to avoid painting shadow zones.

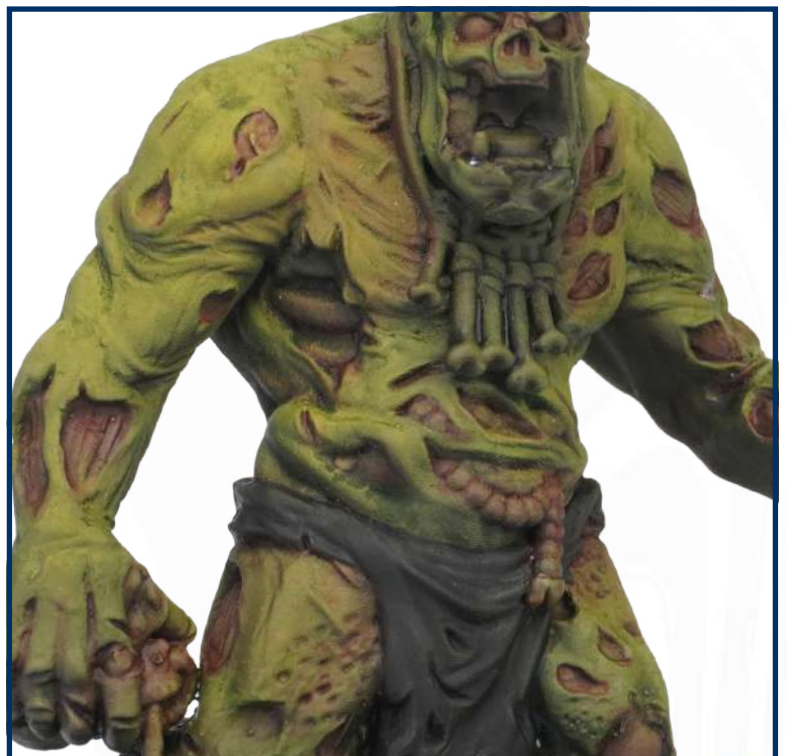

4.

To quickly define the skin, I use the Xpress color PLAGUE GREEN (Vallejo's ref 72.419), thinned down in a ratio of 4 parts of water to 1 of paint. I apply it over the whole skin

5.

To get a fresh meat effect I apply the Xpress color CARDINAL PURPLE (Vallejo's ref 72.408) to the wounds.

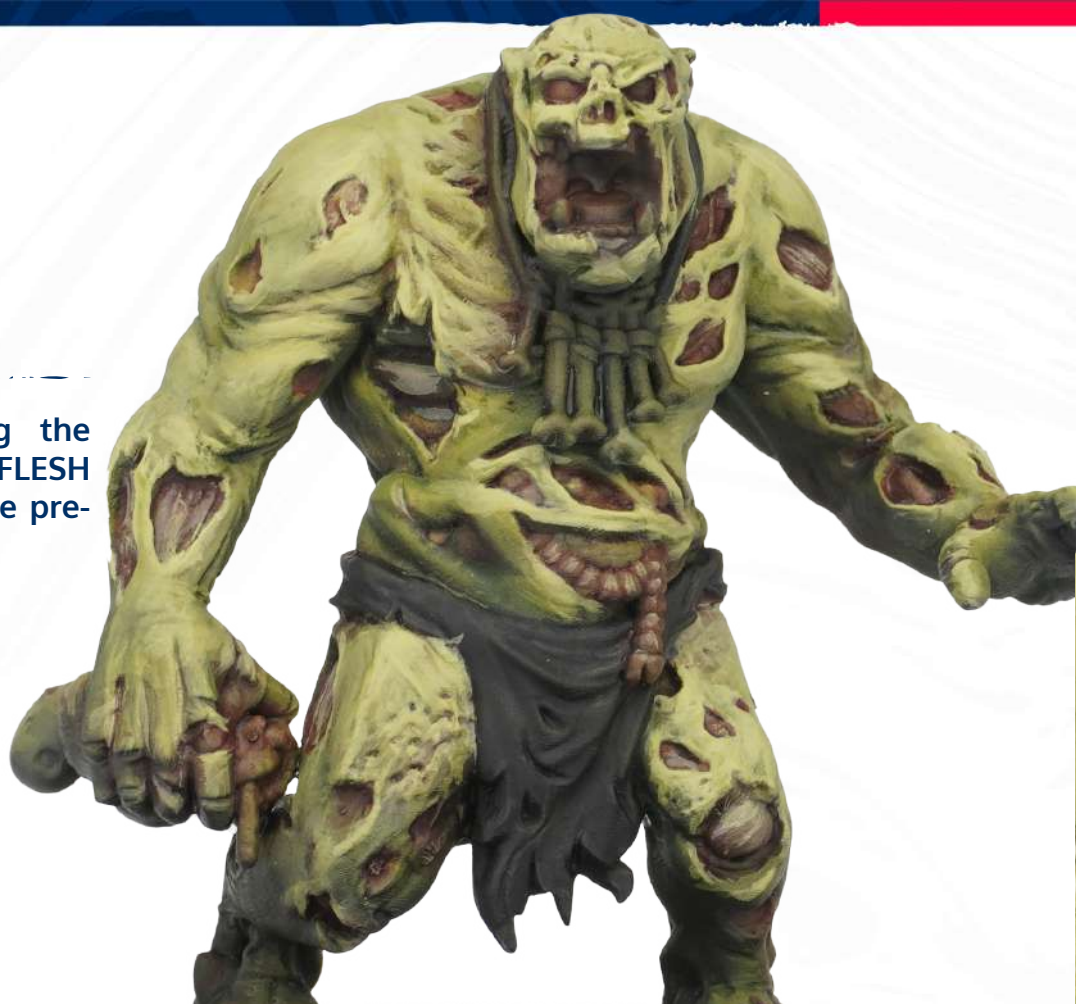

6.

To highlight the skin a bit more, I mix 50% CAMOUFLAGE GREEN (Vallejo's ref 72.031) + DEAD FLESH (Vallejo's ref 72.035).

At this step, I especially define the facial expression and the areas near to the wounds.

7.

To continue highlighting the skin, I add a little DEAD FLESH (Vallejo's ref 72.035) to the previous mixture.

8.

I use pure DEAD FLESH (Vallejo's ref 72.035) to paint the final highlight of the skin.

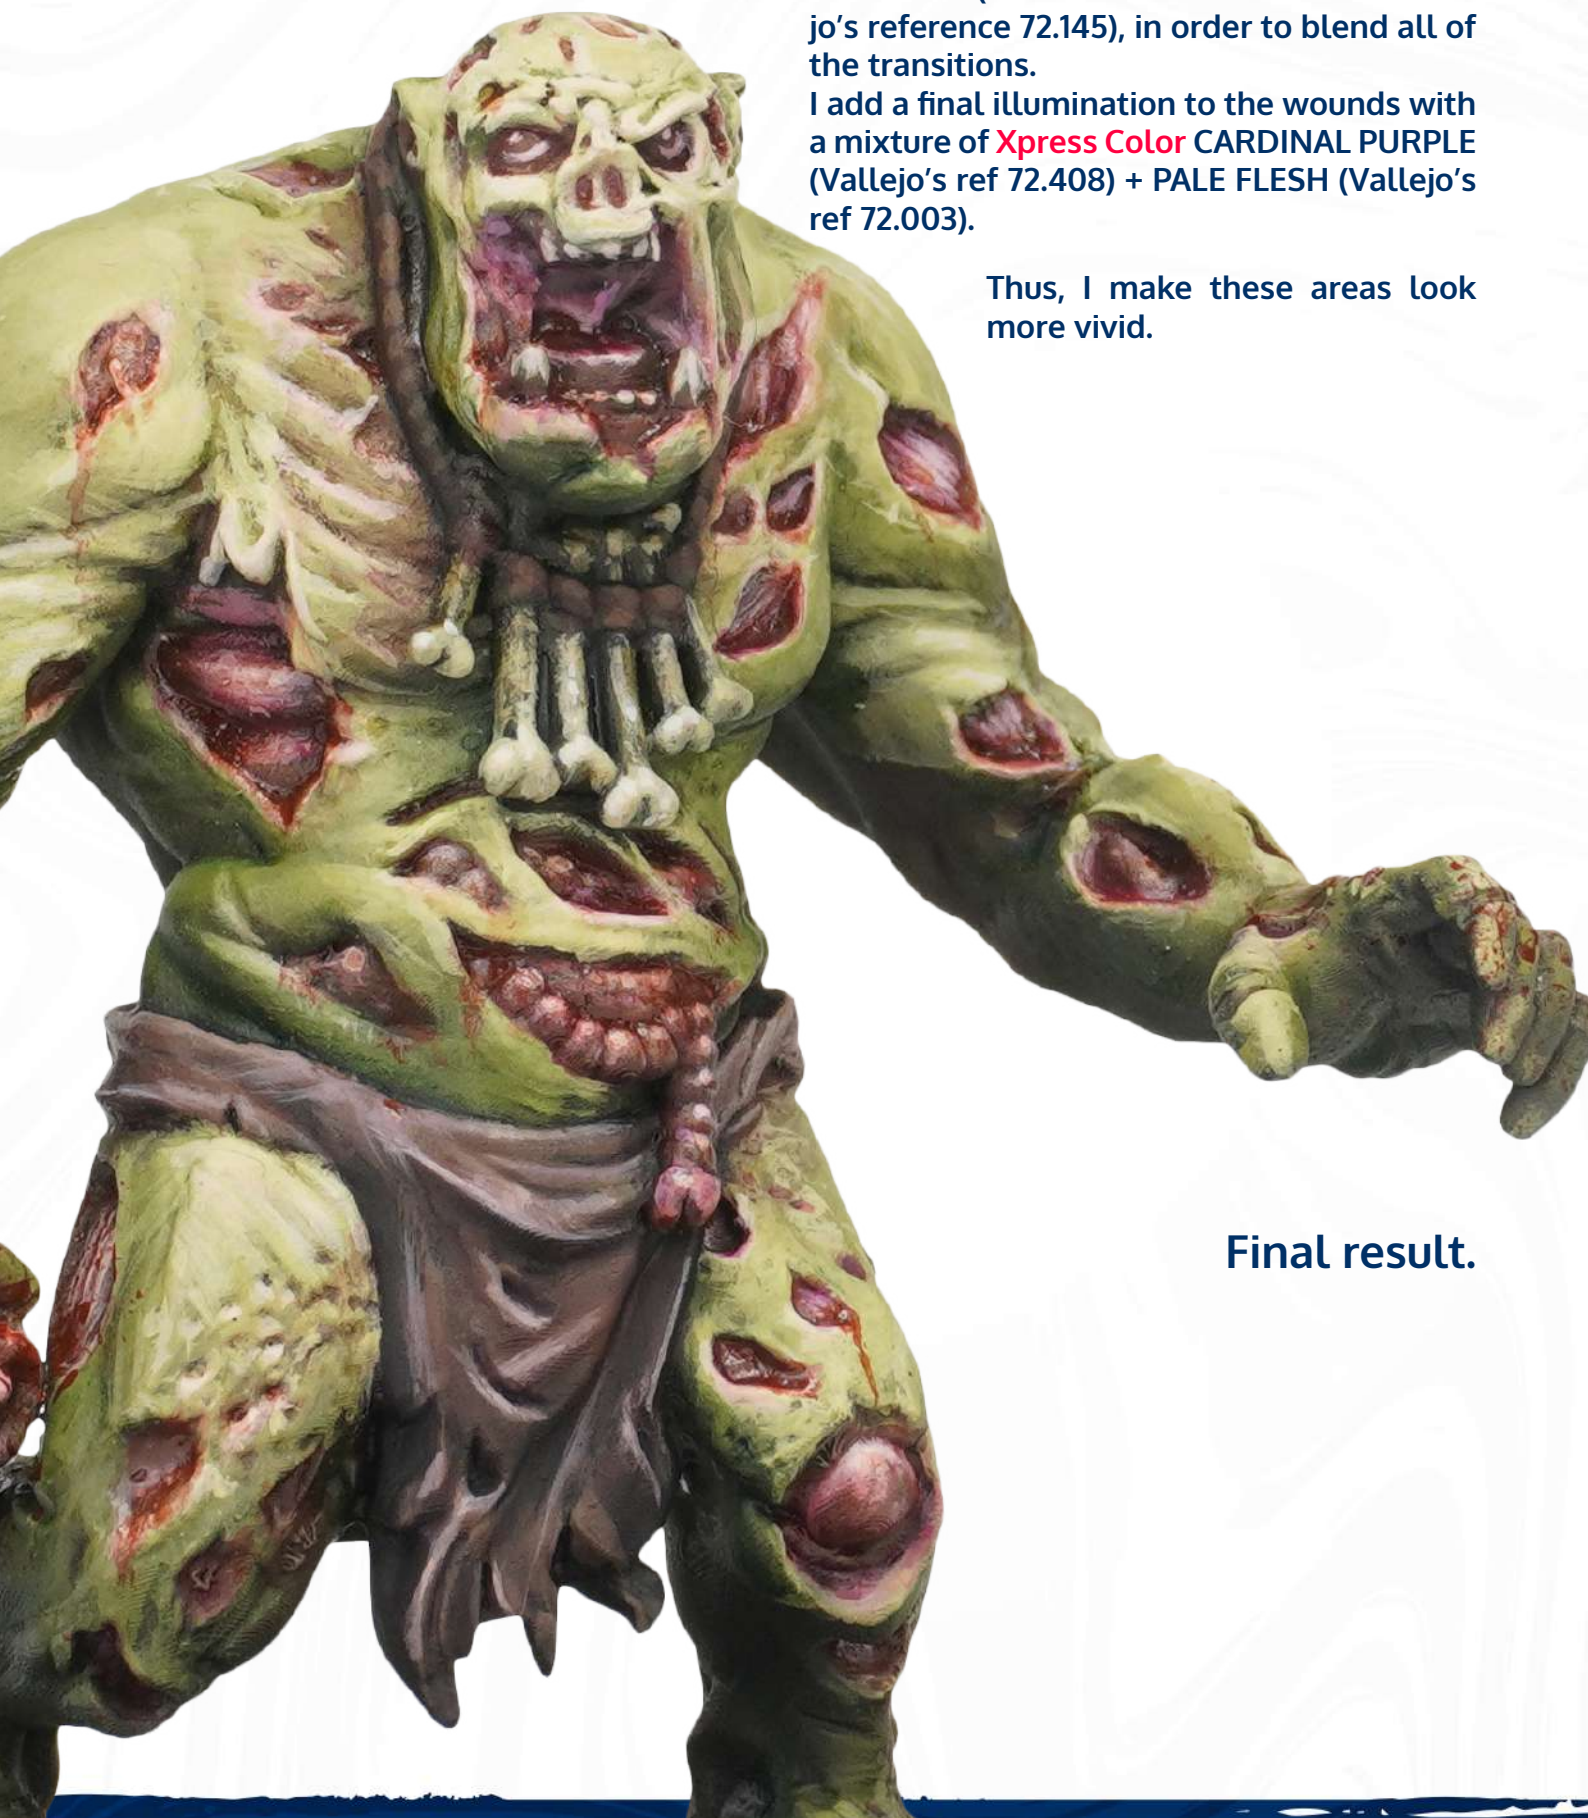

9.

Finally, I apply a glaze on the skin with the base color (Remember: DIRTY GREEN Vallejo's reference 72.145), in order to blend all of the transitions.

I add a final illumination to the wounds with a mixture of Xpress Color CARDINAL PURPLE (Vallejo's ref 72.408) + PALE FLESH (Vallejo's ref 72.003).

Thus, I make these areas look more vivid.

Final result.
